Letter from the Chair J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board

I am privileged to serve as the Chair of the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board and to present its Annual Report for 2006 • 2007. This report focuses on the ways in which the Fulbright Program accomplishes its great purpose—to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of the world. It contains inspiring highlights about Fulbrighters who make lasting contributions in many fields including government, higher education, journalism, law, science and technology. Muhammad Yunus, a Fulbright alumnus, was the recipient of the 2006 Nobel Peace Prize. Thirty-six other Fulbrighters are recipients of Nobel Prizes as well.

Through my travels as Chair of the Fulbright Board, I have experienced firsthand the extraordinary accomplishments of Fulbright participants. Fulbrighters make a lifelong commitment to mutual understanding and the contributions they make continue long after their formal exchanges have concluded. During this past year, I had the opportunity to travel to several cities throughout South Africa for my first visit to this extraordinary region. I will always remember the Fulbrighters I met there as well as those in the other countries where my travels for the Board have taken me. I continue to be impressed by how Visiting Fulbrighters, after spending time in the United States, return home to play important roles in their countries' development. Likewise, I have the highest regard for our remarkable American Fulbrighters who learn all they can about their host countries, through studying, teaching and conducting research, sharing their knowledge and expertise with others. I am also grateful for the extraordinary work that is done every day by our Ambassadors and the staff at American embassies, by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, by the binational Fulbright commissions, by cooperating agencies, and by academics and university administrators, all of whom are essential to the success of the Fulbright Program in countries around the world.

Meeting with Fulbrighters is not only a part of Board member travel but it is also part of the Board's quarterly meetings. This year, we hosted Visiting Fulbrighters from Nicaragua, Mexico, Zambia, Germany, Indonesia, Russia and Rwanda. American Fulbrighters took part as well, including those who went to places as far apart as Norway and Mozambique. The Board engaged in conversation with U.S. Fulbright Scholars who spent time in Argentina and Turkey and also with a number of Humphrey Fellows beginning their studies in the United States. We hosted panels made up of administrators and Fulbright campus advisors as well.

Fulbright Report

I am pleased in this Annual Report to share some of the wonderful stories we have heard about what Fulbrighters have achieved in countries around the world and here in the United States. You will also find profiles of distinguished alumni who have contributed so much since their Fulbright experiences. Throughout this Annual Report, you will find highlights about the extraordinary impact the Fulbright Program has on individuals, communities, and countries.

This report also describes many of the Board's activities over the past year and the priorities which it pursued for the Fulbright Program – one of the most important being to reach wider audiences, thereby achieving greater diversity. The Board has continued to support programs and policies with this aim and to encourage practices that advance this goal.

During my tenure as Chair, I have been in e-mail contact with a number of Fulbrighters from around the world. Recently I received one such e-mail from Max Ringsgwandl, a Visiting Fulbright Student from Germany, who received a Master of Journalism degree from American University in May 2007. He wrote, "Looking back at the application process for the scholarship in 2005 I exactly remember what I wrote in one of the required essays: 'The most effective way of intercultural exchange probably happens in the everyday life.' ... I always liked being a "cultural ambassador" and I strongly believe that by interacting with people I have changed some perceptions about Germany and Germans. It definitely happened the other way round. I'm so grateful that Fulbright allowed me to come here and study. It was a time of hard work and long study hours, but it was also a lot of fun and I made some great friends. The last ten months have been both a wonderful professional and personal experience. It's just amazing what this scholarship means to me and my family. My parents, for example, are great and smart people, but they couldn't even go to college when they were young. Now they came here to watch the commencement ceremony where their son gets his Masters. What can I tell you? I just love Fulbright."

I believe each Fulbrighter has a story to tell. Each exchange is the story of a unique individual and of the people he or she has met during the course of the Fulbright experience. Each grant is also the story of lives changed – the Fulbrighter's life of course, but also the lives of the students, colleagues, and neighbors with whom the grantee comes in contact. I believe this is what Senator Fulbright had in mind for the Fulbright Program many years ago when he set out to create a way for individuals to better understand one another. I believe, as he did, that each Fulbright grant brings us one step closer to a more peaceful world.

Annual Report 2006-2007

The Nobel Peace Prize

The 2006 Nobel Peace Prize was awarded to Fulbright alumnus Muhammad Yunus and to Grameen Bank for their efforts to create economic and social development from below. The Committee said, "Lasting peace can not be achieved unless large population groups find ways in which to break out of poverty. Micro-credit is one such means. Development from below also serves to advance democracy and human rights."

Muhammad Yunus of Bangladesh was a Fulbright Student to Vanderbilt University in 1965. He is the first alumnus of the Fulbright Program to win the Nobel Peace Prize. Thirty-seven Fulbright alumni from ten countries have won Nobel Prizes in all.

In selecting Yunus, the Nobel Committee said, "Muhammad Yunus has shown himself to be a leader who has managed to translate visions into practical action for the benefit of millions of people, not only in Bangladesh, but also in many other countries. Loans to poor people without any financial security had appeared to be an impossible idea. From modest beginnings three decades ago, Yunus has, first and foremost through Grameen Bank, developed micro-credit into an ever more important instrument in the struggle against poverty. Grameen Bank has been a source of ideas and models for the many institutions in the field of micro-credit that have sprung up around the world…Across cultures and civilizations, Yunus and Grameen Bank have shown that even the poor can work to bring about their own development."

Yunus has said of his Fulbright grant, "Fulbright provided me the bridge to cross. I saw how things can be done differently in a different society....I learned lessons which stood me in good stead when building up the Grameen Bank."

The Grameen Foundation USA is also headed by a Fulbright alumnus, Alex Counts, who received a Fulbright fellowship to Bangladesh, where he trained under Muhammad Yunus.

Milton Friedman

Milton Friedman, one of the most influential economists of the 20th century, died in 2006. He was recognized throughout the world for his advocacy of the free market, a concept shaped by his experience as a Fulbright Visiting Professor at Gonville & Caius College at Cambridge University in the United Kingdom in 1953-54. Friedman won the Nobel Prize in 1976 for his "achievements in the fields of consumption analysis, monetary history and theory and for his demonstration of the complexity of stabilization policy..." Friedman interpreted and helped to popularize "supply-side economics," which formed an important part of American public policy in the second part of the 20th century. A prolific writer, his book Free to Choose was a bestseller and translated into 14 languages. Upon learning of his death, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice offered this statement:

With the passing of Milton Friedman, a great Nobel Laureate in Economics, I have lost a great friend and the nation has lost a one-of-a kind leader and intellect. In addition to being one of the brightest intellectual lights of our nation, Milton was warm, funny, and irrepressible. He was a source of great support to me during my time as Provost at Stanford University and continued to be a friend and advisor when I returned to government. My thoughts and prayers go out to his remarkable wife Rose. She was a full partner in all that he did. We all share her loss. Released on November 17, 2006

Alan MacDiarmid

Fulbright New Zealand alumnus and Nobel Prize winner Professor Alan MacDiarmid passed away in February 2007, at his home in Philadelphia. One of the earliest participants in the New Zealand Fulbright Program, Professor MacDiarmid was awarded a Fulbright Graduate Award in 1950 to complete his Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin. He had a long and notable career at the University of Pennsylvania and shared the 2000 Nobel Prize in Chemistry with colleagues Alan Heeger and Hideki Shirakawa for the discovery and development of electrically conductive plastics.

Professor MacDiarmid acknowledged the life-changing impact of his Fulbright award shortly thereafter, when addressing Fulbright New Zealand's Awards Presentation Ceremony in 2001. "I really cannot say, cannot express adequately, how grateful I am to the Fulbright programme," he said. "If it were not for the Fulbright fellowship I would certainly not have had the good fortune of obtaining a Nobel Prize, and I would probably never have left New Zealand. Certainly I think we all owe a great deal of gratitude to Senator Fulbright—his programme, I think, is conceptually one of the world's greatest education programmes to have been started."

Jack Valenti

Former Fulbright Board member Jack Valenti died on April 26, 2007. Long-time president of the Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA), he served in the U.S. military in World War II. He received his B.A. from the University of Houston and an M.B.A. from Harvard University. Valenti later became a special assistant in President Lyndon B. Johnson's White House. He served as a member of the Board of Foreign Scholarships from 1967-69, now called the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board.

Ralph H. Vogel

Ralph H. Vogel, the Staff Director for the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board from 1965 to 1997, died on June 2, 2007, at the age of 82. Then Chair of the Board Hoyt Purvis wrote in the Board's Annual Report at the time of Ralph's departure from the FSB office, "One who merits special appreciation is Ralph Vogel, who has been associated with the Fulbright Program since 1952 and became Staff Director for the Board in 1965. His service spans most of the history of the program and he has been a central figure in its development. His loyalty, his commitment to and knowledge of the program are legendary and justifiably so…" Ralph Vogel retired from federal service in 2004.

In November 2006, Under Secretary of State for Public Diplomacy and Public Affairs Karen Hughes announced the recipients of the new International Fulbright Science and Technology Award, which was designed for top-level students in these fields to undertake Ph.D. study at America's leading universities. She announced the award at the first U.S. University Presidents Summit on International Education in January 2006, which had been convened by Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and Education Secretary Margaret Spellings. The first year's winners came from Argentina, Bangladesh, Brazil, Canada, China, Colombia, Croatia, Cyprus, Egypt, Estonia, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Lebanon, Nepal, New Zealand, Poland, Russia, South Korea, St. Lucia, Switzerland, Thailand, Turkey, Uganda, and Venezuela. Recipients were chosen through a rigorous, multi-tiered, merit-based selection process consisting of in-country competition and review, field and discipline merit review by top-level U.S. academic leaders, and nomination by a blue ribbon Advisory Panel, including a Nobel Laureate and university deans and presidents. Final selection was made by the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board.

AMIDEAST Conducts 50th Anniversary Symposium in Cairo, Egypt

AMIDEAST's (America-Mideast Educational and Training Services, Inc.) office in Egypt marked its golden anniversary in December 2006 with a gala dinner and a symposium on Egyptian Education and Training for the Global Economy. Nearly 500 Egyptian and American officials, educators, business leaders, and AMIDEAST alumni attended the celebration. Assistant Secretary Dina H. Powell paid tribute to AMIDEAST in her keynote address at the December 6th symposium. She praised AMIDEAST as "a symbol of excellence in international education" and a "bridge of understanding" between the American and Egyptian people. She said, "Today is a celebration of AMIDEAST, and nothing can be more fitting or more proper than to celebrate 50 years of AMIDEAST in the most difficult and challenging of times....Through programs... [such as the Microscholarship program] ....and with Fulbright and other partner organizations, we have sent more than 2,500 Egyptian students and professionals to the United States on academic and professional exchange programs. In addition, the U.S. State Department has sent hundreds of U.S. scholars and students to Egypt. The U.S. Embassy here in Cairo has sponsored hundreds of English language programs... these two-way exchanges not only communicate the values and principles of the United States through its people, but... give us a chance to learn from the rich history, talent and culture of the Egyptian people firsthand. The many alumni of these programs have a powerful multiplier effect and they take their experiences and understanding into all walks of life."

France

U.S. Fulbright Student to France Osamuede Osemwota, "Ede," conducted research at the École Normale Supérieure de Cachan, on a particular HIV-1 integrase inhibitor, DKA, that may lead to a new form of HIV medical therapy. Ede aims to combine her medical and research interests and to become a biomedical researcher. As a senior Biochemistry major at DePauw University, Ede has been involved in several very different research projects that have helped shape her career interest. Ede considers that the Fulbright exchange program gives her the opportunity to combine her scientific abilities with her desire to alleviate the effects of HIV/AIDS.

William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board for their investment in me in 1989 when they awarded me a Fulbright Scholarship to study law at Georgetown University....it was under the Fulbright Scholarship that I conceived of the idea of establishing ACCORD which today is the premier conflict management institute in Africa with tangible successes in peacemaking...the impact of the Fulbright Scholarship cannot be measured by my personal achievements alone but it must, in this case, be measured by the 15 years of contribution that ACCORD has made to peace in Africa." Gounden presented the FSB Chair with a certificate as an ACCORD "Ambassador of Peace" in support of peace and development in Africa.

In Durban, the Chair also visited McCord Hospital, which has hosted several Fulbright Researchers working on HIV/AIDS. He also visited the African Art Center and toured an exhibit on "Zulu Ceramics" organized by Fulbright-Hays Research Student Elizabeth Perrill.

UPCOMING HIGHLIGHT FOR 2007 • 2008 FSB ANNUAL REPORT

In August 2007, the Board held its quarterly meeting on the campus of the University of California, Berkeley. One highlight of the meeting was the reception for Fulbrighters hosted by the University. In attendance were many distinguished Fulbright alumni, including Dr. Charles H. Townes, professor emeritus at Berkeley and Nobel Prize winner in 1964 in Physics for his role in the invention of the maser and the laser. During 1955 and 1956, Townes was a Guggenheim Fellow and a Fulbright Lecturer, first at the University of Paris and then at the University of Tokyo. The Board meeting began with greetings from the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost Dr. George Breslauer. Sessions included four panel discussions, with Fulbright administrators, Fulbright scholars, Fulbright students, and a panel of Berkeley scholars

Board Members Attend University Receptions Honoring Fulbrighters

Gainesville

In March 2007, the President of the University of Florida in Gainesville, J. Bernard Machen, hosted a reception for approximately 200 Fulbright Visiting Students and Scholars at the University of Florida and Fulbright Student and Scholar alumni from the University. The Provost of the University, Janie Fouke, spoke at the reception as did the FSB Chair Steven J. Uhlfelder. For the Chair, it was a return to his alma mater. The Chair encouraged the visiting students and scholars to become involved in their host U.S. communities and to help educate American children about their countries. He also encouraged them to take back to their home countries information about America.

Austin

The University of Texas at Austin hosted a reception on February 5, 2007 to honor Fulbright Students and Scholars in its academic community. The event was the inspiration of Linnet Deily, a member of the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board. Nearly 100 guests attended, including three members of the FSB: Vice Chair Shirley Moore Green; John Sibley Butler; and Jan D. O'Neill. UT Austin Vice Provost Terri Givens, herself a Fulbright alumna, opened the program, which included remarks by University President William Powers, Jr. and by Jerry Wilcox, Director of the UT Austin International Office.

FSB member Donald Vermeil spoke at the opening dinner of the San Francisco Fulbright Enrichment Seminar in March 2007, which was one of nine such enrichment meetings organized by IIE and hosted by the U.S. Department of State. The focus of the 2007 Enrichment Seminars was Leadership and Public Service. The San Francisco group included nine U.S. Fulbright alumni and 143 first-year Fulbright students from all over the world. Three out of four presenters in the interactive panels, including the keynote speaker, were alumni of the Fulbright Student Program. Participants spent one morning visiting Bay Area high schools and each Fulbrighter was hosted for dinner by a Bay Area resident.

In April 2007, the Fulbright Board Vice Chair, Shirley Moore Green, gave remarks at the dinner on the opening night of the San Antonio Fulbright Enrichment Seminar. This seminar included ten U.S. Fulbright alumni and 144 first-year Fulbright students from many countries. The keynote address was given by a notable Fulbright alumnus, who is the Honorary Consul of the Federal Republic of Germany, attorney Bernard Ben Buecker. Fulbrighters also heard from community leaders who participated in a panel entitled "Innovation for Public Good." Participants in the Enrichment Seminar spent one morning visiting San Antonio area high schools and each Fulbrighter was hosted for dinner by a San Antonio local resident. The FSB Vice Chair joined students from Cambodia, Turkey, Russia, Guatemala and Egypt when they went to Breckenridge High School to talk to students in a world history class. The visiting Fulbright students were enthusiastic about their visit to Breckenridge and delighted at their welcome by the school's mariachi group.

FSB Vice Chair Shirley Moore Green and Board Member Donald Vermeil emphasized in their remarks to the Fulbrighters the importance of participating fully in the communities where they are studying and of going into schools and sharing their cultures with students, many of whom have never had the opportunity to interact with someone from the Fulbrighters' countries. Board members Green and Vermeil encouraged the Fulbrighters to continue this outreach once they returned home — sharing their experiences of America and encouraging others to apply for the program.

The media and math fans clamored to meet Professor Terence Tao in August 2006 at the 25th International Congress of Mathematicians in Madrid when he became one of the youngest, and the first Australian, to win the prestigious Fields Medal, one of the top honors for mathematicians.

The boy from Adelaide, Australia—who went to America on a Fulbright Scholarship at the age of 16—won a US$500,000 MacArthur Fellow grant, awarded to talented individuals with exceptional creativity and promise for future important advances just one month after receiving the Fields Medal. Gathering awards is not a new experience for Professor Tao, who won medals at the International Mathematical Olympiad

(IMO) at the ages of 10, 11, and again at 12, where the average age of students at the Olympiads is 19. He remains the youngest gold medalist in the tournament's history.

In 1992, Tao, who already had a Bachelor of Science Degree with First Class Honours and a University Medal from Flinders University became the youngest ever Australian Fulbright Postgraduate Scholar. With his Fulbright grant, he went to Princeton University to complete a Ph.D. in pure mathematics. Since then he has published hundreds of articles, delivered numerous guest lectures, and also held various positions including as Assistant Professor and Visiting Fellow at universities in the United States and in Australia. Colleagues call him the "Mozart of Maths."

U.S. Fulbright Student Peter Swendsen may have drawn some strange looks from fellow hikers when he pulled out his microphones to record the subtle sounds of the Norwegian outdoors. Swendsen, whose Ph.D. work is in music composition, was affiliated while in Norway with NOTAM, a resource center for electronic music. His electronic music is based on sounds recorded in nature. Swendsen's music can be heard on his web site, http://people.virginia.edu/~pvs8g/.

One of the most active members of the Ukrainian Fulbright Alumni Association has been Oleksandr Pronkevych, who is the head of the Department of Foreign Languages at Petro Mohyla State University for Humanities in Mykolayiv. In 2003-2004, he was a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Department of Spanish and Portuguese. Like other fellow alumni, Oleksandr has helped to organize the Association's annual conferences. But he has also worked with his university colleagues to initiate a number of other projects relating to higher education—some have addressed scholarly topics such as "Contemporary American Literature," and "American Literature and Visual Arts," while others have focused on educational reform and civic education. In 2005, he cooperated with U.S. Peace Corps Volunteers to conduct a seminar on

"Empowering the Student Community," devoted to leadership, strategic planning and organizational development for 80 university students from different parts of Ukraine. As a member of the university administration, Oleksandr has promoted important educational reforms and worked to improve ethical standards in Ukraine's system of higher education.

Thailand

Sarah Sieloff's time as a U.S. Fulbright English Teaching Assistant in Thailand was spent learning, teaching and experiencing the richness of Thai culture. One of her most rewarding experiences was the opportunity to learn conversational Thai Sign Language at Nakhon Pathom School for the Deaf. She began learning sign language after she discovered that in two of the classes she taught at Pattarayarn Wittaya School, almost half the students were deaf. "All my students touched my life in one way or another, but my deaf students stole my heart," she said.

She wrote of her experiences at Nakhon Pathom, "Visiting the Deaf School was like visiting a family made up entirely of brothers and sisters. My relationship with Nakhon Pathom School for the Deaf, its administration, staff, and students, was an integral part of my Fulbright experience, just as much as teaching at Pattaryarn Wittaya...Perhaps the most moving yet simple thing my deaf students taught me was that laughter is universal. Among my kids, there were some who were completely deaf and never uttered a sound, others who were severely hearing impaired but would make different noises as they signed, and a few who could mimic some verbal inflections enough for me to understand them when my sign language gave out.

All could read lips, but more strikingly all could laugh, spilling forth great bellyfuls of laughter onto ears that could not hear it. My experience at Nakhon Pathom School for the Deaf helped define my time as a Fulbrighter. The unconditional acceptance that staff and students alike showed me—even after I came to a teacher's birthday party bearing orchids, a flower traditionally reserved for Thai funerals!—is the essence of Thailand and its people."

Philippines

Dr. Royal Hartigan, a U.S. Fulbright Scholar (2006-2007) in the Philippines, is known for his celebration of life with his colleagues, students, and the community through African music and drumming. He inspired those he taught and generously shared his time, talents, and expertise in and outside of his host institution, University of the Philippines. During Dr. Hartigan's end-of-grant-presentation, a student was overheard saying that his first name (Royal) is truly befitting of how he was as a performer, teacher, and as an individual.

Dr. Royal Hartigan (pictured here), playing the middle drum.

Dr. Hartigan described his Fulbright experience saying, "For me the Fulbright experience is a beginning, and I hope to use music and dance as a means toward contributing what I can toward this work, the same goal that J. William Fulbright envisioned when he began this great program. It has been a life changing experience, living in and being a small part of, an ancient culture, connected to a people in a profound way, a feeling of having contributed as much as I could given time constraints, an equal feeling of having received even more from my Philippine friends and hosts, a sense of forming lifelong bonds that time and space would not diminish, and a sense of responsibility to continue this work. We are no longer only citizens of a town, region, or nation; we are also global citizens and it is our responsibility to make a difference for the survival and betterment of the human family."

Japan

Kenny Fries, an author and adjunct lecturer at Goddard College in Vermont, undertook his Fulbright Scholar grant to Japan to conduct research for his book, Genkan: Entries Into Japan. It explores how the United States and Japan view the body and physical difference through Fries' experience in Japan as a foreigner with a disability. Fries' research included several meetings on disability issues with Japanese scholars. "Perhaps the most exciting professional event was meeting with Hanada Shuncho, a scholar and writer with cerebral palsy whose article on images of disability in Japanese culture I used. My over three-hour meeting with Hanada-sensei not only provided a basis for my research, but was an extremely moving personal exchange. The communication between us, across cultures, across languages, generations, and different physical disabilities will always remain with me as an example of an important cultural dialogue." Fries' Fulbright Scholar year also provided him with opportunities for other creative work with Japanese colleagues. He continued his collaboration with singer Mika Kimula on "In the Gardens of Japan," a song-cycle for voice and traditional Japanese instruments based on Fries' poems. Additionally, Fries collaborated with calligrapher Yugo Yasuda to produce the tenugui (scroll) and published two articles (available in Japanese translation) in Normalization, a publication by the Japanese Society for the Rehabilitation of Persons with Disabilities. "My Fulbright experience was a true gift, not only for me, but for the many I came in contact with during my stay," says Fries.

Botswana

Lisa Lopez Levers, an Assistant Professor of education at Duquesne University, received a yearlong Fulbright Scholar grant to Botswana to teach graduate courses at the University of Botswana's Counselor Education Program and to conduct research for her project entitled "Sustainable HIV/AIDS Abatement Endeavors in Southern Africa: Considering Contextual Factors and Designing Culturally Relevant and Gender-Sensitive Counseling and Education Activities." During her grant, Lopez Levers assisted the university in developing a master's counseling program, delivered a keynote speech on the culture of traditional healing in southern Africa and advised students. She also spent time in the local communities conducting research and collaborating with over 15 villages and towns to develop community-based services for children affected by HIV/AIDS, especially for the over 120,000 children orphaned through the disease. Additionally, Lopez Levers designed the Botswana Integrated Resilient Child and Strengthened Community Project and Registered Trust in Botswana, Counseling for Health International—a group ensuring that resources reach grassroots organizations helping children affected by HIV/AIDS in Sub-Saharan Africa. Lopez Levers told the Duquesne University Times, "The sooner we intervene with children at risk, the greater the possibility becomes that we might prevent serious problems later in life. If I can assist in preventing such damage, pain and suffering, then I feel that I may have contributed something."

Barbados

Syed Akhter of Marquette University in Wisconsin conducted seminars and taught classes in several countries and then went on to become a Fulbright Scholar in Barbados. There he held a lecturing/research grant in globalization and the performance of Caribbean firms. Akhter says that his Fulbright experience was enriching in many ways. "By living among the community, I had an opportunity to experience local hospitality... The opportunity to meet with top executives in Barbadian firms and University of the West Indies (UWI) students was the highlight of my trip. It was a pleasure to see how receptive local business leaders were to receiving a Fulbright Scholar and sharing their valuable time to further our understanding of the impact of globalization on firms in a small economy," Akhter said. In another forum, Akhter made a presentation at the Barbados Industrial Development Corporation (BIDC) on how firms in developing economies can improve their competitive positions in a global economy. The presentation was followed by a case discussion on foreign market entry strategies. BIDC then donated BD$1,200 to the Management Studies Program, University of the West Indies (UWI), to further the research that Akhter had begun. "To promote international collaboration in research activities, I have included a professor from UWI to work jointly on my project; by doing so, my plan is to extend the scope of the project beyond Barbados to other Caribbean countries," said Akhter "I left Barbados with a warm feeling for the people and the culture they represent. While participating in many Barbadian venues, I shared the American point of view; however, for mutual understanding to result, the lessons I learned must be carried back to my classes at Marquette University and to the broader academic community of the United States" Akhter wrote.

Moldova

Chris Grant wrote about his Fulbright Scholar grant to Moldova: "I arrived in Chisinau in January 2006 in the midst of a cold and dark winter night—if anyone had told me then that the city was a lush garden most of the year—I would not have believed them. ... In my appointment, I was assigned to two universities, the State Institute for International Relations (IRIM) and the Institute of Political Science and International Relations (ISPRI) in Chisinau. At both, I taught classes on American government and American foreign policy and at IRIM, I taught a class on the American South for English language students. Later in my grant, I would be invited to lecture to Moldovan civil servants at the national Academy of Public Administration. All of my experiences were eye-opening. I have reflected on my return that during my time in Moldova, every day was a new adventure and I never had felt more alive in my life...A great joy of my Fulbright Scholar experience came from outside the classroom through connections made in the city. For example, I facilitated three English language groups for two local NGOs, giving me the opportunity to meet professionals from a variety of professions. I also studied Romanian with a private tutor while I was in Chisinau. Another great experience was my involvement with Clipa Siderala, a NGO concerned with children's advocacy in Moldova. Clipa Siderala is a leading catalyst for creating an information conduit for understanding the dilemma of Moldovan children living in institutions. Each year they conduct several outreaches to orphanages, and I was able to accompany them for several. Since returning from Moldova, I was honored to be named Clipa's 2006 Volunteer of the Year and was invited to profile the organization at a UNICEF conference on interventions to improve the status of women and children."

Jordan

Professors Emeritus Eileen and Edward Lundy were granted Fulbright Scholar grants to lecture at the University of Jordan at Amman for education and American Studies respectively. The scholarly couple used their Fulbright Scholar grants to further their already expansive projects. Eileen Lundy, from the Department of English, Classics, Philosophy and Communications at the University of Texas San Antonio, and Edward Lundy, professor from Austin Community College, both took great pleasure in the opportunity to teach Jordanian students and work with their faculty. The husband and wife team first discovered Jordan during an archaeological trip to the country while teaching in the American Culture and Literature Department of Bilkent University in Turkey. The Fulbright Scholar grants allowed the two to further develop the relationship between America and countries abroad through education and the teaching of American Studies. The couple found Jordanian students both curious and hardworking. Students were given the opportunity to learn more about American culture.

The couple was also able to give seminars to faculty and help coordinate a mini-conference between students and faculty. "If you are patient and keep working in finding allies in mutual exchange, you can make something good happen," said Ed Lundy. The Fulbright Scholar experience has given Ed Lundy fuel for his next project. He plans to write a textbook introducing American culture to students in the Middle East in collaboration with faculty members from the region. His hope is to bridge understanding between the influence of geography in culture and family. Eileen Lundy will also be working on preparing material and guidance for those individuals who will be working in American Studies in the Middle East and moving their programs toward a comparative focus.

Ukraine

Hortense Simmons, Professor Emeritus at California State University, lectured on African-American literature and culture at Petro Mohyla Mykolayiv State University in Ukraine during her Fulbright Scholar grant. Speaking of her students, Simmons said, "I admire their discipline, their hard work, their genuine interest in African-American literature and culture. Though primarily accustomed to lectures, my students quickly adapted to participating in class discussions, often offering perceptive assessments of the readings, probing me for answers to complex political and social underpinnings connected with the works. I loved it! I truly enjoyed having them drop in my office to discuss matters not associated with our class." As part of her Fulbright Scholar experience, Simmons prepared curriculum packages not only for her host university, but also for three other universities where she delivered guest lectures: Dnipropetrovsk National University, Kyiv Linguistic University, and Shevchenko University in Kyiv. Prior to her arrival, she selected instructional materials for Petro Mohyla. "At this point, Petro Mohyla probably has the finest selection of books and videotapes on African-American literature in the country," Simmons enthused.

Arnold Tsunga, a 2006-2007 Hubert H. Humphrey Fellow from Zimbabwe at the University of Minnesota, is a human rights lawyer and the executive director of Zimbabwe Lawyers for Human Rights, an organization that provides legal representation to victims of human rights abuses. At the University of Minnesota, Tsunga explored the links between the practice of law, human rights, and sustainable human and national development.

Argentina

Two Fulbright alumni from Argentina, José Barbero and Tomás Serebrisky, met at the World Bank headquarters in Washington, DC where they were both employed. They eventually started to work together on issues facing the Argentine economy. In March 2007, Argentina's largest newspaper Clarin published an article detailing their encounter, reporting news about the high cost of Argentina's logistics (transportation and storage of goods) compared to those in more developed countries.

Some Fulbright experiences bring unexpected surprises. Silvia Gigena, from the small town of Alicia in Córdoba, participated in the Fulbright Administrator Exchange Program and had a rewarding time shadowing her American colleague, Lorissa Nelson, at Grand Traverse Academy in Traverse City, Michigan. Silvia and Lorissa decided to start a student exchange program between their two schools. Yésica Olivo and Andrés Filipi were selected to participate in this exchange and went to Michigan. When they returned to Argentina, they planned to bring with them two Americans to spend a semester going to school in Argentina.

Cyprus

Fulbright Student Charles A. Stewart, a Ph.D. candidate from Indiana University, worked in Cyprus on his dissertation in art history, balancing textual analysis and field research. While at the Cyprus American Archaeological Research Institute, he studied Middle Byzantine domed churches on the island. The churches Mr. Stewart studies were rebuilt in the period between 688 and 965 A.D., when Cyprus was divided between the Christian Byzantine Empire of Constantinople and the Muslim Arab Caliphate of Damascus.

Argentina

Dr. Joseph McConnell, a Research Professor from the Desert Research Institute in Reno, Nevada carried out landmark research while a Fulbright Scholar in Argentina. With the support of the Fulbright Program, the U.S. National Science Foundation and the Instituto Antárctico Argentino, Dr. McConnell and his colleagues measured total aluminum, a metal found almost exclusively in dust from the earth's crust, in a 120-meter-long ice core obtained from James Ross Island at the northern tip of the Antarctic Peninsula. The highly detailed record of soil dust spans the period 1832 to 1991 and shows that dust deposited from the air onto James Ross Island more than doubled during the 20th century. This increase closely paralleled measured air temperature increases of approximately 1° centigrade in the Southern Hemisphere and southern South America over the same period, with high dust levels in the Antarctic Peninsula corresponding to warm and dry conditions during spring and summer in Patagonia and southern South America. "To our knowledge, this is the first record that shows a close correspondence between recent climate warming and increases in atmospheric dust," said Dr. McConnell.

Georgia

Fulbright Scholar Dr. Reid Ferring, a geography professor at the University of North Texas, taught archaeology at the Tbilisi State University and worked with the Georgian National Museum to create an exhibit on the Dmanisi archaeological site. He has participated in Dmanisi archaeological excavations with Georgian archaeologists since 1993 and was a member of an international team of archaeologists who discovered the 1.8 million-year-old hominid skulls beneath the ruins of a medieval town. Dmanisi has been recognized in the international academic and popular media as not only

In October 2006, Assistant Secretary Dina H. Powell visited Rome to consult with Italians from a range of professions on the current state and future prospects of U.S.-Italian and transatlantic relations and to seek their views on the factors most likely to shape U.S.-Italian relations. To emphasize the importance of "people-to-people" diplomacy, Assistant Secretary Powell visited a local high school participating in student exchanges and met with a large group of United States - Italy exchange program alumni, including Fulbrighters. She encouraged them to join the State Department's "global community" of alumni, who continue to build common bonds and share ideas by networking with fellow alumni around the world at www.alumni.state.gov. As a result of discussions that took place between the Assistant Secretary and U.S. Ambassador Ronald Spogli, a former member of the Fulbright Board, an initiative was undertaken to increase English language learning in Italy. Fulbright Scholar Maria Iliou directed the historical documentary The Journey: The Greek Dream in

She received a Fulbright Artist grant to study at New York University in 2003 for research on her film A Friendship in Smyrna. During that research, Iliou came across archival material concerning the Greek immigrants who came to the United States beginning in the late 19th century through the early 1970s. She collaborated with historian Alexander Kitroeff and made the documentary based on archive material, personal stories and interviews. Personal testimonies in the film include those from former Senator Paul Sarbanes, author George Pelecanos, poet Olga Broumas, Ellis Island archive director George Tselos, and film critic Dan Georgakas. The film was screened at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, at the Hellenic American Union (bi-cultural center) and in Athens at Benaki Museum, the director of which is Angelos Delivorrias, also a Fulbright alumnus. #### Jordan

U.S. Fulbright Scholar (2006-2007) Dr. Elaine Bond of Brigham Young University's College of Nursing, worked with doctoral students at the University of Jordan's Faculty of Nursing. She wrote that her time as a Fulbrighter was a rewarding experience that allowed her to watch her students go from "uncertain strangers to a cadre of colleagues who can debate unendingly, but who support each other when discussion is over. They are learning how to be educators, researchers, and authors in every sense of the word. This is a new experience, both for the doctoral students and for the Faculty of Nursing." Dr. Bond said that Jordan is experiencing greater demand for new nurses than its colleges of nursing can produce. Dr. Bond found that while all of the students had some writing experience in their Masters' programs, writing in English for publication was a formidable task. "As we began the fall semester, I committed to the students that each of them would have publishable papers before the school year was over. They worked diligently as they learned new skills—some how to use a computer for the first time; all of them, how to do a literature review online, how to determine inclusion and exclusion criteria for research articles they would discuss in their papers, how to use spell/grammar check, and more importantly, how to trust each other to review what they had written."

Rachel Mamiya from the University of Hawaii at Manoa worked as a Fulbright English Teaching Assistant in Pirai, Brazil in 2006-2007. She wrote about some of her experiences in Brazil: "Currently I'm involved in two major projects here: ELL (English Language Learners), which teaches English to young students in local public schools and X-Cross, an international project which combines science, technology and language education for middle school students. I accompany the ELL project in 6 different local schools, observing, participating and co-teaching classes. I also work on helping coordinate teacher development activities. I just got back from the mid-term X-Cross project conference. ... Teachers, coordinators, IT specialists and administrators from Germany, Italy, Peru, Canada, Vitória and Piraí [Brazil] were in attendance. Our students had a chance to show the work they've been doing with X-Cross; we were all very proud of them. I did a presentation on prospects for improving the English language aspect of the project through Content Based Language Instruction. #### Austria

Jenna Cushing-Leubner had a Fulbright Critical Language Initiative grant in Turkey to enable her to study the Turkish language before starting her project concerning the Turkish minority communities in Vienna. She wrote of her time in Turkey and in Austria: "The third day I was in Ankara, Turkey, I found myself sitting beside our pantry across from my roommate and fellow Fulbrighter, Joanna, with bags, cans, and jars

sprawled out on the floor around us, and a dictionary and notebook covered in penned pictures of fruits, vegetables, and diagrams of rooms propped on our knees. After spending the first day of our Turkish class learning the alphabet, and the first two evenings smiling and nodding vigorously with our host mother, our necks were sore and we'd taken it upon ourselves to be able to communicate, one noun at a time....there are very few similarities between Turkish and English, and I spent much of my first couple weeks in Turkey just trying to clear my head of any structure which up until then I understood language to fit. While my main Fulbright grant would bring me to Vienna, Austria, my proposed project focused on the first and second generation Turkish migrants there, and in order to carry out the personal interview portion of my work, knowledge of Turkish was a must....After my short, but intensive, two and a half month stay in Turkey, I not only left with a strong grasp of Turkish, but with firm relationships, and an understanding of and love for the Turkish culture, which I never could have grasped on my own, and which ultimately became one of my greatest assets in making connections in the Viennese Turkish community... We were drawn into families, invited to weddings, and taught the remedial ins and outs of what it means to be proud to "have Turkey in your heart". During my time there I was embraced and guided through the intricacies of the Turkish culture and language by the Ankara Fulbright office, and upon arrival in Vienna, I found the office there to be just as supportive and excited about my research as I was... I find myself in conversations daily defending, explaining, questioning, and learning about the Turkish culture, the culture of migration in Austria, the Austrian understanding of their own rapidly changing culture, and my place as an American, an outsider and an insider to each perspective at once."

Peter Miller received a Fulbright Student Grant to Austria for 2006-2007. He wrote of his time as a Fulbrighter: "As an American filmmaker I am very honoured to have received a Fulbright Fellowship to practice my art.... A Fulbright Fellowship has not made me rich and famous ... Nor has a Fulbright Fellowship created in me a deep, blind love for my or another culture, it has only made it clearer that culture is a hard thing to wrap a border around and that people are pretty much people everywhere, regardless of their affiliations and should be approached as individuals. I applied for a Fulbright because I wanted to be exposed to the rich series of experiences that it would afford me and because I wanted to engage intimately with a foreign film culture that had produced so many of my favourite film works."

"As a filmmaker, my Fulbright proposal was to investigate the tradition of the Austrian Avant-Garde Film from within the Viennese film tradition and to make a body of film work in response to that period of investigation...At first I had a problem of locating a darkroom where I could process and print my films, but that turned into an artist's residency at a local photo coop where I will have the opportunity to give a presentation and show my new work to the other students. When I met other filmmakers who were also dissatisfied with the lack of alternative film screening spaces in Vienna, we formed our own Invisible Film Festival and have assembled a regular monthly screening series where artists can come and show and discuss new work.

artwork will do for other people, it has removed me from myself and has returned me to myself strange. It has let me be undone in ways I didn't think I could be. I've changed as a person; I've changed my mind in a deep and profound way. This has been at times unsettling, but it is exactly what I wanted."

Finland

Liesl Yamaguchi and Katherine Wilson were both Fulbright Student grantees to Finland in 2006-2007 and both are also recipients of the Lois Roth Endowment award, which is granted annually to exceptional American Fulbright students in Finland. Yamaguchi studied the history and current status of women's political empowerment and participation in Finland during a time which marked the centennial anniversary of enfranchisement in Finland. Wilson worked on the design and construction of furniture, studying wood as a building material in both its rustic and industrialized forms.

Yamaguchi had multiple interests to pursue while she was abroad; she made a presentation on the Japanese internment in the United States during World War II, she directed a play at the University of Helsinki, Wilson and Yamaguchi ice skate in Finland. and she represented Finland at the EU-NATO and Berlin Week

Seminars. It is unusual for visiting students there to be fluent in Finnish; in addition to her studies in architecture and furniture design, Wilson was invited to speak on her topic to the American Women's Club in Helsinki, and she attended the U.S. Fulbright Association's annual conference, held last November in conjunction with the Moroccan Fulbright Alumni Association in Marrakech. She also participated in the Fulbright Berlin Week. As can be seen in the photo, Yamaguchi and Wilson are avid ice-skating enthusiasts.

Egypt

In the summer of 2007, the United States-Egypt Fulbright Commission conducted a pre-departure orientation for Egyptian participants in the 2006-2007 academic year Fulbright Scholar Program. The orientation included presentations on "U.S. Society and Values," "U.S. Campus Life," and "Practical Experience in the United States". Fulbright alumni – including Leonard Wood and Mohamed Ismail Ibrahim – shared their experiences with the new Fulbrighters. Others who assisted in the orientation were Dr. Khaled Fahmy, Associate Professor and Director of Graduate Studies, Middle Eastern and Islamic Studies at New York University. Haynes Mahoney and Assistant Cultural Affairs Officer Catherine B. Jazynka from the U.S. Embassy also took part. Ambassador Francis J. Ricciardone welcomed the scholars to the orientation and shared his experiences as a Fulbrighter to Italy. The Egyptian Scholar Program provided opportunities for approximately 18 Egyptian post-doctoral faculty members, professionals, and independent scholars to conduct research at American institutions in the academic year.

Shaker Hebara with local children on the steps of St. Katherine Monastery.

Mohamed Shaker Hebara, a 2006-2007 Humphrey Fellow from Egypt, spent his fellowship year at Cornell University, where he focused on the protection of land and biodiversity through community-based natural resource management and rural development. In his capacity as department director in the Nature Conservation Sector in Egypt's Ministry of Environment, he worked with the St. Katherine Protected Area, a World Heritage Site. His work with the Conservation Sector in this protected area is seen as a model for community-based resource management in the Middle East, simultaneously working to preserve the natural environment and cultural and religious traditions while strengthening the local economy. While at Cornell, Hebara was able to share his expertise and has contributed to the design and development of a new course there on Water Management in the Middle East.

Fulbright artist Bradly Dever Treadway, together with Justin Randolph Thompson, exhibited his work in Florence in April 2007. The exhibit consisted of a site-specific installation of photography and sculpture directly related to the history of the Hospital of the Innocents, founded in 1491. This hospital was once an orphanage where parents could leave their children by spinning them through a wheel that led into the hospital. One half of a broken coin was left with the child, the other half kept by the parents. Later, when better capable of caring for the child, the mother or father could reclaim their child by presenting and matching the halves of the coin. The installation employed both the symbol of the coin and the wheel of exchange as metaphors for broken communication present in contemporary society.

Indonesia

Roger Long studied Indonesian theater, music and wayang kulit (puppets) while a Fulbright Scholar from 1967 to 1969. He went on to become a professor of Southeast Asian arts at the University of Hawaii and, according to the Consul General in Surabaya, continued to be a highly effective ambassador of culture and friendship between the two countries for the next 40 years. He befriended many Indonesian Fulbrighters and cultural exchange visitors. He worked with the Consulate to give as a gift to Indonesia the puppets he had collected over the years. He wrote to the Consul General, "This is so important to me, and I cannot express my thanks to you for helping me return the wayang to Pak Suhirdijan...where their essential spirits can rejoin their forms to help children and young dalang become more aware of the beauty of their heritage and meaning." Professor Long died just as the last box of his puppets arrived in Indonesia. In a tribute to the Professor, the school receiving the puppets held a ceremony/performance to honor him and to welcome the puppets home.

Hungary

In November 2006, U.S. – Hungary Fulbright Commission staff, Fulbright alumni and U.S. Embassy officials boarded a bus emblazoned with Fulbright banners to tour the northeast of Hungary. The Fulbright Alumni roadshow was the idea of the Hungarian Fulbright Association. Several of the alumni in the Association had witnessed American-style roadshows, such as political candidate bus tours, while they were in America during their Fulbright exchanges.

The roadshow stopped at universities in each of the cities, where participants advertised and recruited applicants for the Fulbright Program. They met with alumni to highlight and celebrate the 60th anniversary of the Fulbright Program in Hungary and to spark interest in forming new alumni association chapters. At each stop, the roadshow participants set up information stands with Fulbright booklets and brochures on American life and study in the United States. The U.S. Embassy Cultural Affairs Officer Mark Tauber and Fulbright Commission Executive Director Huba Bruckner opened each day's sessions with introductions to the Fulbright Program and its importance. Both described the values commemorated annually by International Education Week. The Fulbright Student Advisor, Nelly Litkei, spoke on study in America, from searching for the right university (including scholarship opportunities) to maintaining alumni contact through clubs and web-based communities. Embassy Vice Consul Suzanne McGuire described the student visa process.

Each day Hungarian alumni from various fields and different graduating years discussed the value of their Fulbright experiences. At the end of the day, roadshow participants presented a DVD on the life of Senator Fulbright, which placed in historical context Fulbright's contribution to mutual understanding and highlighted the distinguished alumni of the Program. At some stops, Fulbright alumni gave brief poetry readings from their published works and one current grantee in music gave a piano recital.

The roadshow event was an extraordinary experience for the over 50 alumni who either rode the bus or met at the various locations. Additionally, Fulbright Teacher Exchange alumni have begun to discuss plans to form alumni association chapters in the southern Hungarian cities of Pecs and Szeged.

Uganda

In March 2007, Ugandan alumni of U.S. government-sponsored exchange programs met with Assistant Secretary Dina H. Powell, in the cities of Gulu and Kampala. In Kampala, Powell addressed a reception at U.S. Ambassador Steven Browning's residence attended by some 75 former participants in Fulbright, International Visitor, Voluntary Visitor, Foreign Press Center, and other exchange programs. Uganda's first Fulbrighter, Professor William Senteza Kajubi, also spoke at the reception, recounting memorable experiences he had while studying at the University of Chicago and visiting Texas in the early 1950s. Kajubi, who has been an influential leader in the development of Uganda's education system and is currently Vice Chancellor of Nkumba University, said, "I congratulate the American people on the progress you have made in advancing tolerance and freedom in your country."

Jordan

In April 2007, the U.S. Fulbright Students in Jordan, with their Jordanian counterparts, organized and participated in a conference in Amman entitled "U.S. Democracy Strategy: An American-Jordanian Dialogue." The three-day conference examined America's democratization initiatives in Jordan and developed creative strategies to enable Jordanians to work more effectively for democratic change. In his opening remarks at the conference, His Royal Highness, Prince Hassan bin Talal, who is a Patron of the Binational Fulbright Commission in Jordan (see photo at right) said, "We need to create a society of stakeholders ...We must create the institutions and structures needed to transform the values of democracy into processes." Distinguished guests on that day included former United Nations Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and Her Excellency, Senator Leila Sharaf from the Upper House of Parliament. Sharaf was there also as a member Emeritus of the U.S.-Jordan Fulbright Commission's Board. Also in attendance was Mr. Christopher Henzel, Political Counselor of the U.S. Embassy in Amman and Chair of the Commission.

Malaysia

When floods devastated one area of Malaysia, the Fulbright English Teaching Assistants (ETAs) who were working there realized that thousands of people were being affected by what was considered the worst flooding in 50 years. When one of them saw an article in the New Straits Times entitled "Johor Needs Your Help" (referring to an area particularly hard hit), the ETAs decided to help. They launched clothing drives and fundraisers in their respective schools with posters and boxes spread out in the hallways to receive donations, and shopping carts were filled with purchased food. Two ETAs decided to hold a competition between their two schools to see which could raise the most money and the results were remarkable. With little over a week to gather donations, each school contributed enough to fill some cars and buses with food, clothing and donated English-Malay dictionaries and lesson books. The ETAs had the opportunity to take the donations to schools in Johor and talk with people in the communities that had been affected (learning from one woman that crocodiles from the river had been in her kitchen and from another that the floods reached their second floor windows). The ETAs said that more is needed but were glad that they had been able to involve their students in supporting those in need and had found a way to say thank you to Malaysia for the warm way it had welcomed them.

Japan

In cooperation with alumni and supporters, the United States-Japan Fulbright Commission launched a major fundraising effort—the J. William Fulbright Centennial Fundraising Campaign—targeting private sector support. The goal is to raise two-hundred million yen (approximately, 1.8 million U.S. dollars) to fund more than 40 Fulbright grants over five years. Prominent American and Japanese leaders, both Fulbrighters and other supporters, established an Advisory Council in support of this campaign.

Spain

The United States-Spain Fulbright Commission is continuing to computerize its files and digitize photographs from its historical archive. Institutional grants have allowed researchers to use these archives to carry out studies and publish papers on United States-Spain cultural and educational relations. Thousands of documents have been computerized and annual reports and program plans since 1959 have been digitized as well as photographs of grantees and postcards and posters. One of the objectives of the exhaustive work is to make the collection available to researchers; there are already research projects being carried out on topics such as American Studies in Spain, U.S. Fulbright grantees in Spain, and the films of the United States and Spain.

Cyprus' 9th Annual U.S. University Fair took place in October 2006 at the J. William Fulbright Center in the Ledra Palace Hotel. Twenty-one institutions were represented by admissions officers or local alumni and 400 visitors attended, primarily high school and college students interested in obtaining firsthand information from the university representatives about their undergraduate and graduate programs. Parents, teachers, school and college counselors also attended. Cypriots came from communities from all over the island. Honorary Chairman of the Fulbright Commission U.S. Ambassador Ronald Schlicher visited the fair and met with many of the college representatives.

Australia

Professor Kenneth Mayer from the University of Wisconsin was the inaugural Fulbright Australian National University (ANU) Distinguished Chair in American Political Science. This new Fulbright Scholarship was the result of cooperation between the Australian National University, the U.S. Department of State and the Fulbright Commission. The scholarship brings a noted U.S. Scholar in political science to Australia each year to undertake research, build collaborative links and share knowledge through a range of speaking events around Australia. The purpose is to increase awareness of the study of American politics and government in Australia and promote collaborative and comparative research in political science between the two countries.

There are currently about 30 Fulbright Distinguished Chair positions annually, with this position being the first offered in Australia and the East Asia Pacific Region. ANU is hosting the Chair for the first five years after which it will be open to other Australian universities. Professor Mayer, (see photo above) a leading American political scientist with a background in campaign finance, legislative behavior and executive power, won the 2002 Neustadt Award from the American Political Science Association for his book, With the Stroke of a Pen: Executive Orders and Presidential Power.

Bulgaria

In February 2007, the Public Affairs Section of the U.S. Embassy in Sofia, Bulgaria, hosted the "Sredets" Fulbright Art Exhibit. The art exhibit highlighted the talent of two U.S. Fulbright grantees and brought together Bulgarian alumni of various U.S. government-funded exchange programs. The exhibit, held in conjunction with the Bulgarian Culture Ministry and the U.S.-Bulgaria Fulbright Commission, featured the work of current Fulbright grantee Brad Guarino and past Fulbright grantee Nadine Zanow (1997). Deputy Culture Minister Ina Kineva and U.S. Ambassador John R. Beyrle addressed the packed gallery to stress the history of cooperation between the United States and Bulgaria in cultural and education exchange. Many Fulbright alumni attended. The exhibit so captured the attention of Bulgaria's art community that the artists were asked to showcase their works in another principal Bulgarian city, Ruse.

Australia

In June 2006, Australia's University of Tasmania's School of Government hosted the 2006 annual Australian Fulbright Symposium in Hobart on the topic of Maritime Governance and Security. The aim of the annual Symposia, sponsored by the United States-Australia Fulbright Commission, is to demonstrate the Commission's mission of "promoting mutual understanding between the peoples of the United States and Australia through educational and cultural exchange." Delegates attended sessions on Maritime Law and Governance, the Marine Environment, and Terrorism and Counter-terrorism. In launching the Symposium, Earl Irving, U.S. Consul General, Melbourne outlined the importance of relations between Australia and the United States plus the strong maritime links, pointing out that "… in many ways, the Australian-American friendship was actually founded by maritime relations…American seafarers are quite familiar with this part of the world and have a long history in Australian waters." He also noted that the Consulate in Melbourne also responsible for Tasmania, was established more than 154 years ago to provide consular assistance to American sailors and merchant marines.

Ireland

The United States-Ireland Fulbright Commission expanded into three new Fulbright programs.

Ireland's first Scholar-in-Residence (SIR) went to Minnesota State Community and Technical College-Fergus Falls in September 2006. In December 2006, two more SIRs from Ireland were named to go to the University of St. Thomas in Houston, Texas and Beloit College in Beloit, Wisconsin. The United States-Ireland Fulbright Commission has also recruited an SIR for Boise State University in Boise, Idaho.

In October 2006, the United States–Ireland Fulbright Commission was notified that one of its candidates for the inaugural Fulbright International Science and Technology Award had been successful. The candidate, Donnchadha Quilty, commenced his Ph.D. studies in Physics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in September 2007.

With generous support from the Irish Government and sponsoring U.S. institutions, the Commission in Ireland sent its first four Foreign Language Teaching Assistants (FLTAs) to the United States in September 2006. With additional financial support from the Irish Government and increased interest from American institutions, the Commission plans to send additional FLTAs and an Irish Language Scholar to the United States for the 2007–2008 academic year.

Montenegro

In February 2007, Fulbright Scholar Ginger Jones gave a presentation to about 40 participants in a seminar in Podgorica. lecture and participated in the discussion afterwards. The participants asked many questions and were curious to learn more about the civil rights movement. They discussed the ways Montenegro and the United States were similar and different during the period of the 1950s. Jones started the first branch of the English honor society Sigma Tau in Montenegro.

Peru

U.S. Fulbright Students in Peru presented their projects at a workshop organized by the United States-Peru Fulbright Commission in November 2006. This marked the first time the Commission had organized such an event. The participants discussed their projects with their colleagues as well as with four Peruvian alumni who acted as resources. The students were able to develop a sharper focus for their projects, including finding new sources of information, developing new links with Peruvian institutions and exploring innovative methods to carry out their research. The students were very pleased with the outcome of the meeting and will keep in touch with Peruvian participants. A follow-up workshop was scheduled to present the results of their research and share their findings.

Philippines

The 1st National Conference of alumni of four programs—the Fulbright Program, the Fulbright-Philippine Agriculture Scholarship Program, the Hubert H. Humphrey Fellowship Program, and the East-West Center Fellowship Program—that the United States-Philippine Fulbright Foundation administers was held at the Ateneo De Manila University, Quezon City, Philippines in December 2006. The Conference afforded the alumni of the four associations an opportunity to meet for the first time to discuss issues important for the strengthening of democratic institutions and civil society in the Philippines and the country's economic development. Alumni saw the significance of holding a meeting of the minds and "hearts" to develop joint project plans. The theme of the Conference was "Developing and Strengthening Diverse Leaders: Giving Back and Making a Difference." U.S. Ambassador to the Philippines Kristie A. Kenney inspired and challenged the alumni with her keynote message.

Chile

In November 2006, the United States-Chile Fulbright Commission held its annual Family Outing. The event was attended by Fulbright U.S. grantees from the Scholar, Student, English Teacher Assistant and Teacher Exchange programs, Chilean Fulbright nominees for 2007 and staff from the U.S. Embassy and from the Commission. Participants and their families (see photo at right) enjoyed the natural beauty of the Chilean national sanctuary, Yerba Loca, which is a park 25 km. from Santiago and protected by CONAF, Chile's National Forest Corporation. The participants also hiked, and observed the plant and wildlife in the park. Jorge Tomasevic, Chilean Fulbright Nominee, led a bird watching group. The participants then dined on typical Chilean cuisine such as "Pastel de Choclo" and "Porotos Granados," accompanied by live Chilean folk music.

With funding awarded through the 2006 Alumni Project Competition by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, the United States-Cyprus Fulbright Commission, in collaboration with the Public Affairs Section of U.S. Embassy Nicosia, launched an island-wide program on Youth Road Traffic Safety. This bicommunal project involves raising awareness about the hazards of high-risk driving, specifically targeting the young driving-age population in both the Turkish Cypriot and Greek Cypriot communities in Cyprus. The overall goal is to educate this high accident-risk group and thus improve the safety on Cyprus' roads. The workshops have been developed by a United States-based Fulbright program alumnus and are being administered in the schools by alumni involved in local non-profit organizations dealing with accident prevention and with youth. A kick-off publicity event was held at the J.W. Fulbright Center in February 2007. The Cyprus Fulbright Alumni Association (CFAA) and other Fulbright program alumni, the press, parents, teachers, headmasters, students, and the public at large were invited. The Executive Director of the United States-Cyprus Fulbright Commission, Daniel Hadjittofi, introduced all the speakers, and the Chairman of the Commission, U.S. Embassy PAO Tom Miller, opened the event.

The Taiwan Fulbright Alumni Association and the American Institute in Taiwan (AIT) invited the 2006-2007 American grantees to a reception, combined with a performance of the Battery Dance group, on tour from the United States.

Honduras

In December 2006, members of the San Pedro Sula Chapter of the Fulbright Association of Honduras (AFH) visited the children at the Love and Life Home (Hogar Amor y Vida). The shelter, run by a foundation by the same name, houses children who are HIV positive, most of whom have either lost their parents or have been abandoned. The visitors delivered gifts donated by members of the San Pedro Sula Chapter to the children. The children sang and danced to their favorite tunes. The director of the home asked the AFH members to share their experiences with the children, stressing the importance of education.

In September 2006, the Honduran Fulbright Association (AFH) coordinated a Leadership Symposium on "A New Breed of Leaders and Their Commitment to Honduras." The Association, which was founded in 1981, raised funds from 28 organizations and brought together over 200 Fulbright alumni, International Visitor alumni, students and community leaders to showcase a new generation in Honduras and the efforts they have made on behalf of Honduras. During this event, the numerous social and educational activities for the disadvantaged developed by the members of the Honduran Fulbright Association were presented.

Anniversaries

Korea

The Korea Fulbright Alumni Association, in conjunction with the Korea Fulbright Foundation and the Korean-American Educational Commission (KAEC), held the commemoration of the 60th Anniversary of the Fulbright Program and the unveiling ceremony of a bronze bust of Senator J. William Fulbright. The Executive Director of the Commission, Jai-Ok Shim, wrote, "In Korean tradition, living to sixty was considered a blessed life and entitled "Whan Gap." Although advancements in medicine and science have made such longevity common, if Senator Fulbright was sitting in the ceremony and could see…what the Fulbright Program had become, I am sure he would have felt the deep and profound meaning of Fulbright's 60th anniversary."

The Korea Fulbright Alumni Association donated the bronze sculpture of Senator Fulbright for display in the KAEC building. The sculpture

Ireland

The year 2007 marked the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the Fulbright Program in Ireland and the 15th anniversary of the Fulbright Commission there. The Fulbright Commission also planned the launch of an Alumni Directory, a concert of Fulbright musicians and a conference during the Anniversary year.

In October 2006, the U.S. Ambassador to Venezuela and the Fulbright Association of Venezuela (FAV) hosted a reception to commemorate the 60th Anniversary of the Fulbright Program. Ambassador William R. Brownfield stressed the importance of the Association's role in the identification of potential candidates for the program and their efforts in strengthening bilateral relations. The event brought together 101 alumni and friends of the Fulbright Program including alumni of the International Visitor Leadership Program, academics, media, and private sector representatives. U.S. Fulbright Scholars, Students and English Teaching Assistants in Caracas also attended.

Italy

On November 16, 2006, Ambassador Ronald P. Spogli invited the Fulbright community in Italy to his residence to celebrate the 60th anniversary of the Fulbright Commission. Ambassador Spogli is a former member of the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board. Ambassador Spogli and Minister Plenipotentiary Gherardo La Francesca, the current chairman of the binational Fulbright board, introduced the new Executive Director, Dr. Maria Grazia Quieti. The anniversary year was also marked by an initiative to increase English language learning. The Embassy worked with the United States-Italy Fulbright Commission for the inclusion of the English Teaching Assistants (ETA) program there. The first group of 15 ETAs arrived in Italy in Fall 2007.

The pilot program Fulbright BEST (Business Exchange and Student Training) was also launched in the 60th anniversary year, to foster entrepreneurship and economic development in Italy. Promoted by Ambassador Ronald P. Spogli and funded by Italian companies through the coordination of CONFINDUSTRIA, the Confederation of Italian Industry, the program provided for five Italian fellows to take part in a six-month academic program at Santa Clara University in California beginning in January 2007. They had internships with firms in Silicon Valley and participated in activities of the Silicon Valley Start-Up Association, such as seminars and conferences at

OVERVIEW

The largest source of funding for the Fulbright Program is an annual appropriation by the U.S. Congress to the U.S. Department of State. In addition, partner nations as well as host institutions in the United States and abroad contribute through direct funding and indirect support such as salary supplements, tuition waivers and university housing.

This report provides information on grants that were awarded to individuals by the Department of State during academic year 2006-2007. Only grants submitted to the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board for review and final selection are included. Grants were awarded to U.S. students, teachers, scholars and professionals to study, teach, lecture and conduct research in more than 150 countries worldwide and to their foreign counterparts to engage in similar activities in the United States.

Also included in this report are grants that were awarded by the U.S. Department of Education which are submitted to the Fulbright Board for final selection. The U.S. Department of Education receives a separate Congressional appropriation for the Fulbright-Hays Program. Since its inception over 60 years ago, approximately 300,000 Fulbrighters have participated in the Program.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE

The Fulbright Student Program

For U.S. and foreign graduate students and graduating seniors.

• In 2006, 1,321 Americans studied abroad with either full or partial support from the Fulbright Program.

• In 2006, 2,822 foreign students were offered new or renewed grant awards for study at U.S. universities.

The Fulbright Scholar Program

For U.S. and foreign scholars and professionals to lecture and/or conduct research in a wide variety of academic and professional fields, including the humanities, social sciences, physical sciences, and business administration.

• In 2006, 1,128 Americans studied and taught or conducted post doctoral research.

• In 2006, 742 visiting scholars came to the United States to lecture or conduct post doctoral research for an academic year or term. Of these, 46 Scholars-in-Residence spent up to a year teaching on U.S. college and university campuses, with a focus on institutions that serve minority underserved audiences such as Historically Black Colleges and Universities, Hispanic-Serving Institutions, Tribal Colleges and small liberal arts and community colleges.

The Fulbright Teacher Exchange Program

For U.S. and foreign teachers and educational administrators primarily at the secondary level—often a one-on-one exchange.

• In 2006, 430 teachers and administrators participated from 30 countries worldwide; 68 others took part in seminars for teachers.

The Hubert H. Humphrey Fellowship Program

For mid-level professionals from developing or newly democratized nations to come to the United States for a year of professional development and academic work at the graduate level. Grants are given in various fields, including public health, economic development, finance and banking, environmental management, educational planning, and law and human rights. In 2006, there were 162 Humphrey Fellows from 95 countries and locales.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

The overseas International Education and Foreign Language Studies programs, authorized by section 102(b)(6) of the Fulbright-Hays Act, are administered and funded by the U.S. Department of Education (USED) under a Congressional appropriation to USED. They are one way programs designed to promote and improve the nation's resources in the less commonly taught languages (LCTLs) and the areas of the world in which those languages are spoken.

In 2006, these four Fulbright-Hays programs supported a total of 1,134 American teachers and prospective teachers, who received their support through U.S. institutions of higher education, organizations or interagency agreements.

The Fulbright-Hays Doctoral Dissertation Research Abroad (DDRA) Program

The purpose of the DDRA Program is to improve, develop and maintain a national capacity to meet the nation's need for specialists in the LCTLs and those areas of the world in which those languages are spoken by providing awards to doctoral candidates, whose career goal is teaching, to engage in full-time doctoral dissertation research abroad in the field of modern foreign language and area studies. In 2006, 163 doctoral candidates received fellowships.

The Fulbright-Hays Faculty Research Abroad (FRA) Program

The purpose of the FRA Program is to improve, develop, and maintain a national capacity to meet the nation's need for specialists in the LCTLs and those areas of the world in which those languages are spoken. The program provides fellowships to language and area studies specialists teaching at U.S. institutions of higher education to enable them to conduct research abroad on projects designed to enhance the nation's knowledge base. In 2006, 20 scholars received fellowships.

The Fulbright-Hays Group Projects Abroad (GPA) Program

The GPA Program provides grants to institutions of higher education (IHEs), state departments of education, private nonprofit educational organizations or combinations thereof to conduct overseas group projects designed to develop and improve modern foreign language and area studies throughout the educational structure of the United States. Types of activities supported include: teacher seminars designed to provide a non-Western perspective on contemporary issues; curriculum teams to develop and field test instructional materials; group research by faculty, teachers and/or students on specific aspects of societies and cultures underrepresented to a significant degree in the curricula of schools, colleges, and universities; and advanced intensive language programs in the LCTLs. In 2006, grants for 48 group projects involving 827 participants were awarded.

The Fulbright-Hays Seminars Abroad Program

The Seminars Abroad Program provides four to six week summer seminars, designed by USED and Fulbright commissions, for K-12 teachers in foreign languages, social sciences and humanities, administrators and curriculum specialists of state and local educational agencies, and college faculty. Upon their return, participants are expected to share their broadened knowledge and experiences with students, colleagues, members of civic and professional organizations, and the public in their home communities. Individual participants are evaluated by the U.S. Department of Education, with the assistance of academic review panels, and then submitted to the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board for final selection. Overseas activities are supported by USED funds under the terms of interagency agreements between USED and the State Department. In 2006, nine seminars involving 124 participants were funded.

ORGANIZATIONS

Principal Organizations for the Fulbright Program

The J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board was created by Congress to supervise the Fulbright Program. Appointed by the President of the United States, the Board is composed of 12 members drawn from academic, cultural and public life. The intent was to establish an impartial and independent body which would ensure the respect and cooperation of the academic world for the educational exchange program, particularly in the selection of grantees and of educational institutions qualified to participate. The Board sets policies and procedures for administration of the program, has final responsibility for approving selection of all grantees, and supervises the conduct of the program both in the United States and abroad.

U.S. Department of State

The U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs (ECA) serves as the administrative and executive arm of the Fulbright Program. ECA has fiscal responsibility for the preparation of an annual budget request to Congress and the Bureau makes decisions on how allocations of the funds, finally approved by Congress, will be made to participating countries. Under policies established by the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board, ECA has primary responsibility for the administration of the program, together with the assistance of cooperating non-profit organizations. ECA administers the program abroad through binational commissions and U.S. embassies.

In a U.S. embassy abroad, commonly referred to as "the post," exchange program activities are the responsibility of a Public Affairs Officer or a Cultural Affairs Officer. At least one of these officers is a member of the local binational commission and maintains for the Bureau the liaison with the commission on policy and program matters. In countries without a commission, the Public Affairs Officer or Cultural Affairs Officer administers the educational exchange program.

U.S. Department of Education

The U.S. Department of Education's Office of Postsecondary Education administers the overseas International Education and Foreign Language Studies program authorized by section 102 (b)(6) of the Fulbright-Hays Act. This program differs from other Fulbright-Hays activities in that its objectives are research and training with no provision for lecturing assignments overseas and no direct exchanges. The program is meant to improve U.S. education in modern foreign language and area and international studies, and is part of the U.S. educational effort in those fields.

Binational Fulbright Commissions

Binational commission boards are composed of equal numbers of resident Americans and partner nation nationals. There are currently 50 Fulbright commissions; Belgium and Luxembourg share a single commission in Brussels. Commissions plan and implement educational exchanges that best promote the Program's objective in a bilateral context, including selection of grantees, fundraising, alumni relationships, and in many countries operating an information service on U.S. study. An executive director and staff are responsible for implementing the commission's programs.

ORGANIZATIONS

Cooperating Organizations for the Fulbright Program

The Department of State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs is assisted by several organizations in the implementation of the Fulbright Program in the United States and abroad.

• IIE (The Institute of International Education), conducts the U.S. student competition and is responsible for the placement and day-to-day supervision of the majority of foreign student grantees in the United States, and for conducting orientation and enrichment seminars for first year foreign student grantees. IIE also administers the Hubert H. Humphrey Fellowship Program.

• CIES (The Council for International Exchange of Scholars), affiliated with the Institute of International Education, assists in the exchange of lecturers and research scholars and is responsible for the screening of U.S. lecturer and research scholar candidates and the day-to-day administration of the exchange program for research scholars and lecturers from abroad.

• LASPAU (Academic and Professional Programs for the Americas) administers the Fulbright Faculty Development Program for Latin America and the Caribbean.

• AMIDEAST (America Mideast Educational and Training Services, Inc.), with field offices in the Middle East and North Africa, arranges study in the United States for graduate students from the region and handles the day-to-day supervision of these students.

• The International Institute of the Graduate School of the U.S. Department of Agriculture assists in administration and recruitment for the one-on-one exchange of Fulbright teachers and administrators. This includes processing of U.S. applicants and the matching of U.S. participants with foreign counterparts.

• AED (The Academy for Educational Development) provides support to the Educational Partnership Program. AED coordinates the independent review of proposals by professional and scholarly experts.

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS SUPPORTING THE FULBRIGHT PROGRAM

Fulbright Association

The Fulbright Association, a private, nonprofit membership organization of Fulbright alumni and friends, advocates increased worldwide support for Fulbright exchanges; enriches the experience of visiting Fulbright students, scholars and teachers during their stays in the United States; and enables lifelong interaction among Fulbright Program alumni globally. Its web site at www.fulbright.org includes an online community for Fulbright alumni and a searchable directory. More than 9,000 individual members and 166 colleges, universities and international organizations support the Fulbright Association. Fifty-one affiliated chapters serve visiting Fulbrighters, alumni, and local communities in 35 states and the District of Columbia. The Fulbright Association also works closely with more than 70 national Fulbright alumni organizations worldwide.

Fulbright Alumni Organizations Abroad

More than 60 countries have Fulbright alumni organizations that welcome American Fulbrighters to their communities, facilitating the settling-in process, assisting them in their research, introducing them to cultural and social activities, and often conducting fundraising to increase the number of Fulbright awards. These associations play an important role in raising the profile of the Fulbright Program abroad.
